Les Mills BodyCombat 45 Body Combat Master Class.[A comparison of the orthodontic and prosthodontic treatment of a patient with transverse maxillary deficiency]. A comparison of the orthodontic and prosthodontic treatment of a patient with transverse maxillary deficiency. In September 1998, a 25-year-old patient was referred to the Department of Orthodontics at the University Hospital Homburg/Saar with a 1.0-mm overjet and 0.5-mm overbite. He was very dissatisfied with his teeth, especially with the maxillary front teeth, and showed several occlusal contacts in the anterior region. He was very obese. The skeletal and dental pretreatment casts revealed a moderately pronounced maxillary deficiency with a borderline discrepancy and a retruded anterior maxilla. The mandibular contour was not concave. The patient was treated with an achilles tendon-aided maxillary protraction using a multistrand wire and a bite plate. After 8 months of treatment, the overjet and overbite had decreased to 0.0 mm and 0.5 mm, respectively, and the patient was delighted with his new appearance. He was satisfied with his new dental contacts and could eat and chew without difficulty. The maxillary deficiency had been corrected, and he was very happy.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor device and a method of manufacturing the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device having a vertical channel. 2. Description of the Background Art In a semiconductor device, a field effect transistor (FET) is used in many cases as an element of a semiconductor integrated circuit. As the FET is miniaturized, it has been required to further miniaturize a channel length. However, as the channel length becomes short, there arises a problem of lowering an operation speed. To improve the operation speed, there has been used a method of short
